

Jane Perry is associate director of the International Healthcare Worker Safety Center at the University of Virginia Health System.

Ms. Perry served as editor of the Center's journal, Advances in Exposure Prevention, from 1994 to 2005. She has lectured extensively on topics related to needle safety in the U.S., Canada, and other countries. In addition to AEP, she has written for numerous journals and published regular columns on exposure prevention for Nursing and Outpatient Surgery Magazine. She co-authored, with Janine Jagger and colleagues, an article in the New England Journal of Medicine on "Risks to Health-Care Workers in Developing Countries," and a chapter on "Occupational Exposure to Bloodborne Pathogens: Epidemiology and Prevention" for the 4th edition of Prevention and Control of Nosocomial Infections, edited by Dr. Richard Wenzel. She has also served as an expert witness for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

Ms. Perry received her B.A. from Scripps College and M.A. from the University of Ottawa.
