

Spencer B. King III, MD, MACC, FACP, FESC, FSCAI

Dr. King is the Fuqua Chair of Interventional Cardiology, the Fuqua Heart Center of Piedmont Hospital, Atlanta, Georgia. He is also Co-Director of the American Cardiovascular Research Institute and Clinical Professor of Medicine at Emory University School of Medicine. He received his medical degree from the Medical College of Georgia and specialized in internal medicine and cardiology at Emory University. He was director of the Andreas Gruentzig Cardiovascular Center of Emory from 1986 to July, 2000. He was President of the American College of Cardiology 1998-1999 and was President of the Society for Cardiac Angiography and Interventions 1990-1991. His memberships and professional societies include: Master of the American College of Cardiology, Fellow of the European Society of Cardiology, Fellow of the American Heart Association Council on Clinical Cardiology, and Fellow of the American College of Physicians. He serves on the Editorial Boards of Circulation, Journal of the American College of Cardiology, American Journal of Cardiology, Journal of Interventional Cardiology, and Journal of Invasive Cardiology and is an editorial consultant for The New England Journal of Medicine and others. Dr. King is presently Chairman of the subspecialty board in interventional cardiology of the American Board of Internal Medicine. During his career, Dr. King has published over 400 articles, directed numerous symposia, and co-authored or edited seven books, including the 2001 edition of "Hurst's The Heart".